Shine Bright

Welcome to our Winter issue and to the close of an exciting 2024! This has been a transformative year, filled with groundbreaking openings, gamechanging developments, and extraordinary design moments. Looking back at our two signature New York events in November, we couldn't be more thrilled. BDNY brought together a record number of industry professionals at the Javits Center, eager to explore, connect, and learn. Meanwhile, the Gold Key Awards at Cipriani 42nd Street celebrated the very best in hospitality design from the past year.

These events are about more than showcasing stunning projects. We also recognized the Boutique 18 class and the Up-and-Coming Hotelier of the Year (learn more about them in our Fall 2024 issue), and fêted our Designer of the Year, Goodrich, at the Gold Key ceremony. In fact, we sit down with founder and principal Matt Goodrich and his team at the New York firm for our cover story on page 51.

A huge thank you to the Gold Key Awards sponsors: Title: Valley Forge Fabrics and VISO; Boutique 18: Nemo Tile + Stone; Designer of the Year: Akula Living; Up-and-Coming Hotelier: Durato; Category: Akula Living, American Leather, Bermanfalk, ICG Italia, Marc Phillips Rugs, Riva Spain, Saatchi Art, Waterworks, and Williams-Sonoma Business to Business; Supporting: Danao, Faulkner+Locke, Franz Viegenger, and OW Hospitality.

The awards event also wouldn't be possible without the dedication of our 2024 Gold Key judges, who you can meet on page 16, as well as all of the deserving winners and finalists. This special issue is dedicated to celebrating their exceptional projects.

BDNY was also filled with creativity. The Power Players: Women Leaders in Hospitality breakfast, for instance, was a highlight, with panelists sharing insights on their wide-ranging careers and the industry as a whole. Flip through the next pages to see photos and moments from a weekend that left us all feeling inspired.

You'll also find the winners and finalists of the 2024 Best of BDNY Product Design Competition on page 56. These innovative new offerings, selected by a panel of industry experts, showcase excellence in both aesthetics and functionality.

Our team is already looking ahead to BDNY 2025—mark your calendars for November 9-10, 2025! We'll give you an exclusive preview in the Fall 2025 edition of Boutique Design. In the meantime, stay in the know on the latest projects, products, and people we're following at hospitalitydesign.com. We look forward to seeing you at our many other events throughout the year!

BDNY RECAP

This year's BDNY was one for the books, drawing more than 15,700 designers, architects, hoteliers, developers, brand executives, purchasers, manufacturers, and other industry professionals from around the globe. The event kicked off with the inspiring HD Platinum Circle Awards gala, honoring four for their lifetime achievements, and wrapped with the 44th Gold Key Awards, celebrating the best in hospitality design.

Over the course of two days, attendees explored innovative products from over 770 exhibitors, experienced the launch of the Dine & Design pavilion anchored by Cafe Hue and visionary Designed Spaces created by top design teams and manufacturers, and took part in more than 40 thought-provoking conference sessions. Topics ranged from neuroaesthetics and emerging F&B trends to insights on AI's role in design, diversity in the industry, and the latest updates from owners and brands—plus a new business-focused track (an extension from sister show HD Expo + Conference) intended to help attendees do and run their businesses better.

Mark your calendars for BDNY 2025, returning to the Javits Center on November 9-10—we can't wait to see you there!

“Each space is designed to be open, with elements like large doors, windows, skylights, and courtyards that create a strong connection with nature.” —Wanbin Liu, Design Director, Chinese BDD Global Interior Design Firm

WINNER
HOMETOWN AND FIELD
CHENGDU, CHINA

The Highlights: Set in the picturesque village outskirts of Dayi County, the hotel is anchored by three distinct courtyards. The first, housed in a restored Western Sichuan building, doubles as a reception hall and historical showcase. A modern steel-and-glass pavilion defines the second courtyard, offering a unique dining experience amidst an indoor vegetable garden. Comprising the six guestrooms, the third is crafted using traditional rammed earth walls and folk techniques. Sustainability was a top priority, with solar panels, ground-source heat pumps, and energy-efficient features creating a retreat that celebrates both culture and conservation.

1 HOTEL HANAIE BAY
KAUA'I, HAWAII

The Highlights: The hotel's transformation blends biophilic design with the landscape, emphasizing sustainability and local ecology. Featuring open-air spaces, green roofs, and reclaimed materials like teak and lava stone, the resort integrates with its cliffside surroundings. Highlights include a lush lobby garden, locally sourced dining elements, and 252 guestrooms with live plants and reclaimed wood. Conservation efforts restored a third of the site, using water and energy-saving systems that honor Hawaiian culture and nature.

FINALIST
SIX SENSES KYOTO
JAPAN

The Highlights: Six Senses Kyoto emerges as a sustainable sanctuary in Japan's cultural capital, blending eco-conscious design with local artistry and traditions. Built to LEED Silver standards, the 81-room resort features smart ventilation systems, low-flow water fixtures, and EV charging stations, achieving a 22 percent reduction in energy use and significant CO2 savings. Courtyard gardens showcase edible herbs, tea plants, and vegetables nourished by compost from kitchen waste, while the Earth Lab fosters collaboration with the community.

WILD PALMS HOTEL
SUNNYVALE, CALIFORNIA

The Highlights: Leaning into the JDV by Hyatt brand's bold, eclectic ethos, the lobby has undergone a vibrant transformation with its "62 and Sunny" design concept, inspired by the region's pleasant climate and the property's 1960s roots. Guests are greeted by a double-height space featuring a custom mobile of colorful circles and dimensional wall accents that evoke a California bungalow aesthetic. A sun-kissed citrus palette, tubular powdercoated furniture, and tropical motifs like beach balls and cabana stripes add to the retro-chic vibe, reimagining the vintage hotel's charm with playful, modern touches.

BRANSON, MISSOURI

SOURCES:

DESIGN AND PURCHASING FIRM: PARINI, DETROIT ARCHITECTURE FIRM: CLOCKWORK, KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI OWNERS: EAGLE POINT HOTEL PARTNERS AND LONGITUDE BRANDING OPERATOR: SPRINGBOARD HOSPITALITY PHOTO: LINEA

The Highlights: The hotel reimagines the classic motor hotel with an updated, welcoming design. Featuring stone-clad columns, overhead doors, and a centralized bar for check-in, retail, breakfast, and evening cocktails, the space serves as a social hub for guests. Inspired by the Ozarks' natural beauty and mining history, the lobby blends reclaimed limestone, rust-toned tiles, leathered stone countertops, and blue-green accents.

FINALIST

MOXY VIRGINIA BEACH
OCEANFRONT

DESIGN AND ARCHITECTURE FIRM: BASKERVILL, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA PURCHASING: CONTRACT PURCHASING & DESIGN OWNER AND OPERATOR: SUBURBAN CAPITAL PHOTO: ISAAC MAISELMAN

The Highlights: The 134-key property invites guests to play in its sandbox through bold design touches and engaging amenities like an oceanfront pool with a sunken bar. From soaring seagull art and a two-story slide to a nostalgic Zoltar machine and octopus-themed installations, the lobby reflects the whimsy of surf culture and the city's revival. Retro tones, weathered woods, and patinaed metals enhance the coastal aesthetic, while playful furnishings like vintage folding chairs and custom boardwalk lamp posts add character.

WINNER

ROMER HELL'S KITCHEN
NEW YORK

The Highlights: The hotel lobby embraces the vibrancy and history of one of Manhattan's most iconic neighborhoods. Inviting public spaces include a living room, library, retail boutique, and the Hell's Kitchen Neighborhood Café. Inspired by the building's original architect Morris Lapidus, the 1960s design language is reflected in cantilevered chandeliers, graphic patterns, modernist furniture, and preserved red marble panels, complemented by warm tones and urban materials. A curated art collection celebrating local icons and institutions further connects the hotel to its community.

MARINA GRAND RESORT
NEW BUFFALO, MICHIGAN

SOURCES:
DESIGN FIRM: CURIOSO, CHICAGO ARCHITECTURE FIRM: DXU ARCHITECTS, CHICAGO PURCHASING: SLATE PROCUREMENT OWNER AND OPERATOR: TOAST HOTEL GROUP PHOTO: DANIEL KELLEGHAN

The Highlights: Inspired by Michigan's Dutch heritage and the charm of summer lake homes, the redesigned property celebrates lakeside living by drawing from the region's woodworking and boat-building history. The lobby, for instance, pairs preserved red oak floors with white oak and ebony furniture, gauzy sheers, and navy-painted wood wainscot for a timeless, nostalgic feel. Handcrafted furnishings, regional ceramics, and subtle nautical patterns create a lived-in feeling.

DESIGN FIRM: ADD DESIGN, GUANGZHOU, CHINA ARCHITECTURE FIRM: TAI'AN CITY CO. LTD, TAI'AN, CHINA OWNER: TAI'AN LIPENG HOTEL MANAGEMENT CO. LTD. OPERATOR: RADISSON PHOTO: COURTESY OF ADD DESIGN

The Highlights: Inspired by Mount Tai's majestic stone steps and cloud-piercing paths, the hotel offers an immersive journey through its design, reflecting the Chief of the Five Sacred Mountains' iconic elements. True to the Radisson RED brand, the hotel pairs bold design with a playful spirit, blending Eastern and international art to create a sophisticated yet lighthearted atmosphere that honors the legacy of the revered destination.

WINNER
THE JAY
SAN FRANCISCO

The Highlights: The Jay's interior reinterprets its Brutalist architecture, blending heavy concrete forms with inviting materials. Inspired by architect John Portman's personal home and San Francisco's counterculture and artistic legacy, the design also pays homage to lesser-known figures like Ruth Asawa and Peggy Caserta. The third-floor lobby, accessed via a striking circular staircase wrapped in custom wood fins, is the vibrant heart of the hotel. A hidden lounge, a reimagined bronze sculpture by Arnaldo Pomodoro, and a garden patio with native plants and sculptural details add layers of history, art, and tactile experience.

SOURCES:

FINALIST
KIMPTON HOTEL THETA
NEW YORK

The Highlights: At the Kimpton Hotel Theta, plush seating, layered textures, and botanical accents foster a welcoming atmosphere while paying homage to architect Morris Lapidus. The 364-key hotel's entry reception features a statement wall and colorful art, while the lobby lounge offers bespoke furnishings, accent chairs, and double-sided sofas for collaborative or quiet moments. The sculptural forms of the lobby connect art and history, drawing in passersby with dynamic design elements.

FINALIST
HYATT REGENCY IRVINE
CALIFORNIA

The Highlights: The revamped hotel lobby serves as a vibrant neighborhood anchor, marrying Southern California's relaxed lifestyle with Irvine's urban edge. The design team transformed the ground floor into an elegant hub featuring custom furniture and pieces sourced from local artisans. A coworking lounge adapts seamlessly to guests' needs, doubling as a craft space, event venue, or private workspace. The all-day café and restaurant infuse understated glamour with cane-inspired bar details and backlit mirrors.

JAPAN

The Highlights: The lobby celebrates the Heian era's Miyabi philosophy of refined nature appreciation, blending biophilic elements like pocket gardens, ikebana, and skylights with playful asobi gokoro and wabi-sabi aesthetics. Nodding to the classic Tale of Genji and Kyoto's heritage, details include Orihon-inspired ceiling designs, traditional weaving with gold and silver threads, Japanese ceramics evoking nearby mountains, and stone flooring. Furniture with organic forms complements a striking living-edge reception desk.

The Highlights: Calling on the building's artistic history, the 75 guestrooms each feature custom furniture with curvaceous forms, clean architectural lines, and thoughtful details like tasseled cabinet pulls, brass doorknobs, and original landscape paintings. Oversized windows open to stunning views of the hotel's gardens and the Pacific Ocean, while design elements, like a celestial stained glass window, reflect the hotel's bohemian legacy and its connection to Carmel Bay.

WINNER

THE HOTEL CHALET AT THE CHATTANOOGA CHOO CHOO
TENNESSEE

The Highlights: Located on the historic Chattanooga Choo Choo terminal campus, the Hotel Chalet offers 127 guestrooms, including 25 set in restored 1920s and 1960s Pullman train carriages redone in Victorian and midcentury styles. The former feature pinch-pleat curtains, bentwood dining chairs, and Tiffany Glass pendants, with a Missoni-print textile evoking the mountainous landscape, while the latter embrace bold colors and retro design elements, such as cantilever breakfast chairs and custom wallcovering with a local daisy motif.

COURTESY OF THE CRAWFORD HOTEL

The Highlights: To mark its 10th anniversary, the hotel—located in the historic Denver Union Station—underwent a significant refresh, which included its 112 guestrooms. Three distinct room types draw inspiration from long-distance luxury train travel, from cozy sleeper cars to the station’s Victorian architecture and loft rooms with timber beams and vaulted ceilings. A rich palette of jewel tones, velvet, and distressed burled woods complement natural materials like leather and wool.

WINNER

ROMER HELL'S KITCHEN
NEW YORK

The Highlights: The 295 guestrooms at Romer Hell's Kitchen evoke the feeling of a bohemian sanctuary, reflecting the essence of a theater couple's New York dream home. Each features a soothing, sage green palette, creating a calm oasis from the vibrant streets of Manhattan. Filled with vintage-inspired, residentially informed furniture and a timeless black-and-white tiled bathroom reminiscent of old-school New York apartments, local art adds an authentic, artistic detail to the spaces.

 BATHHOUSE
 NEW YORK

The Highlights: Cofounders Travis Talmadge and Jason Goodman launched the inaugural Bathhouse in Williamsburg, Brooklyn in 2019, blending modern treatments with a lively social atmosphere. Now, a second location in Flatiron, expands on this concept, featuring a sleek, three-level space inspired by the Hero’s Journey, the common literary theme of a hero’s transformative quest. The space incorporates materials like travertine, stone, and fluted glass to enhance the monolithic reception, moody café, and pools found beneath pyramidal lights, which evoke futuristic remnants of ancient civilizations for a one-of-a-kind, immersive spa experience.

TRAILBORN HIGHLANDS
NORTH CAROLINA

The Highlights: The second opening from the hospitality brand rooted in the great outdoors, the 63-room hotel channels its idyllic surroundings with a restrained design. Set across four lush acres, the property pays homage to its Highlands location with public spaces that flaunt earthy hues layered with a wallcovering that features a licensed pattern by Anni Albers, who taught at the nearby Black Mountain College. Guestrooms are rendered in warm cherry wood paired with neutral-hued walls and mountain views. The Highlands Supper Club, meanwhile, occupies a separate historic log cabin originally built in 1924 by a local carpenter.

CREATIVE FOUNDATION

ROOTED IN CURIOSITY, COLLABORATION, AND CRAFT,
GOODRICH DESIGNS THOUGHTFUL SPACES WITH IMPACT

By Katie Kervin

Matthew Goodrich, principal of his New York-based design studio Goodrich, has cultivated an approach that is rooted in collaboration, curiosity, and pursuing the unexpected. With a career that spans more than two decades, including formative stints at Rockwell Group and AvroKO, Goodrich's perspective champions the art of storytelling in design while embracing a philosophy that every voice contributes. Now at the helm of his own firm, he has fostered a culture that values exploration, resilience, and the transformative power of learning through the unknown.

Collaboration is at the heart of the process. His team employs a distinctive framework he calls the "design foundation," a methodology that combines historical references, aspirational visions, and unexpected muses to create designs that feel both deeply personal and impactful on a wider level. It's an approach that encourages team members to contribute from their own perspectives, allowing inspiration to flow from all levels. "This is not a top-down design firm," Goodrich says. "The creative part of creating a design foundation is about discovering what will make each project truly special."

Since founding his eponymous firm in 2017, Goodrich has leaned into projects that push boundaries, taking on challenges that stretch the team's capabilities. Take the UBS Arena in Elmont, New York, home to the New York Islanders hockey team, which the studio tackled with little prior experience in either live entertainment or sports venues. It became a defining moment, reinforcing Goodrich's ethos: learning by doing and embracing the unfamiliar to create something extraordinary.

His vision for his firm isn't just about creating spaces; it's also cultivating a culture of trust and stability. "I wanted to create a design culture that I hadn't quite found elsewhere," he adds, "giving our team a foundation to feel comfortable but also the confidence to tackle things we've never done before."

Goodrich's own deep and varied experience has shaped his firm's growth; now counting 16 team members and expanding from interiors to encompass branding work for hotels and restaurant groups as well as product design. But it's his ability to lead with empathy and foster the innovative, team-driven ethos that defines his firm today, leading to standout projects such as Romer Hell's Kitchen hotel in New York, a hotel that garnered multiple wins in this year's Gold Key Awards. In the following pages, members of his multidisciplinary team share their perspectives.

MATT GOODRICH

THE GOODRICH TEAM AT SO & SO'S PIANO BAR
INSIDE THE ROMER HELL'S KITCHEN IN NEW YORK

On being part of a small team with a big impact.

Rosie Rainbow, Creative Director: At Goodrich, we strip away hierarchy. Everyone's voice is valued, whether you're an intern or a director. We sit at a round table where ideas from all facets of design are welcomed. With a multidisciplinary team—product and lighting specialists, branding experts—we approach projects holistically. Even when the scope doesn't officially cover every discipline, we pull from our collective strengths.

Megan Schababerle, Project Lead: I started at Gensler, a very large firm, and over time, I've worked at progressively smaller firms. In larger firms, your role can feel narrow, but in smaller teams like ours, you wear more hats and have a greater impact on both design and firm structure. Early on, even as a young designer, I had a seat at the table, and that shaped my goals.

Asli Uluaydin, Design Director: It's like the saying, 'It takes a village to raise a child.' It also takes a village to design. With all our disciplines—furniture, branding, interiors—working together, every component contributes to something exceptional. This all-hands-on-deck approach happens every day, and it's special.

Chris Rizzo, Creative Director, Brand: We don't have parts of the team segregated from one another. Everyone works collaboratively, learning and growing through different pairings on projects. This creates a culture where every team member has an opportunity to contribute and build their skills.

On a multidisciplinary approach.

CR: From the start, we wanted deep thinking and storytelling baked into everything we do. Having all disciplines at the table early ensures a unified voice throughout the project. Matt also wanted to stay deeply involved in the creative process, and our size allows for that. Everyone's engaged and aware, ready to add that special touch.

On the design foundation.

CR: Every project, no matter the scope, starts with the same place and the same thinking. We go through our design foundation process for everything—whether it's branding, interiors, or product design, we use the same research-driven approach. This ensures that even single-discipline projects benefit from insights across the team. For example, our branding strategy has really expanded, informed by the same conceptual thinking we apply to interiors. We've already been doing that thinking.

If you're selecting a doorknob for the project, go back to the design foundation and find a point of reference for it. It feels like such a small detail, but if you have that strong foundation, you should be able to go back to it for inspiration.

RR: We're all heavy researchers, and we always create a multifaceted design foundation that is based on research. Those can come from a number of different sources of inspiration—from the location or the city to the client's brief or aspirations, to the building or architect and the context the project might be in. This foundation informs everything—from schematic design to material selection, art curation, and branding. It ensures consistency and keeps us grounded throughout the process.

THE BAR AT CI SIAMO IN NEW YORK

AU: It's also very useful for clients. Design can be subjective, but when decisions are tied to a solid foundation, it's easier to gain their trust and alignment.

Hines Fischer, Lead Product Designer: The challenge with product is often what is structural about a product is also the thing that gives it an aesthetic. So there's an interplay between your concept and your end result. You're checking your work as you go that the whole thing's going to work. The first thing is that it should be useful, usable, and desirable. So you always start with the function in relation to the end user, and that can often guide the lion's share of the aesthetics.

On convincing clients.

RR: We involve clients in the discovery phase, ensuring their buy-in from the start. If something doesn't resonate, we adjust the foundation. The foundation's strength allows us to pivot while staying rooted in the project's core narrative.

CR: It's about finding common ground. If one concept thread doesn't resonate, we lean into another. The foundation keeps us aligned while allowing flexibility.

MS: The design narrative is really where we come in, but if you think about it from a full design project standpoint, there's a whole phase before us with the client where they're thinking about the form and the function that they want, but also the inspiration they're bringing to the table.

On the Romer Hell's Kitchen hotel project.

RR: Romer exemplifies our multidisciplinary approach. The client wanted a neighborhood hotel, and Matt lives nearby, so it was very personal. We designed the interiors, created custom furniture and lighting, developed the F&B concept, and had creative freedom in branding.

CR: For the piano bar, we suggested adding an apostrophe 's' to the name So-and-So, creating a character and story that influenced everything—from programming to the art and drink pairings. It gave the space a distinct personality. The name really influenced a lot of the brand and ID in the space as well as function of the music program. That was all part of the creative process.

HF: The building was designed by Morris Lapidus in the 1960s. [Matt and I love] to find ways interject a few references to what it originally was into the furniture and lighting. We looked at some of his other buildings, their interiors, finding old photographs in the neighborhood to pull the references from. Everyone has an idea of what things were like in the 1960s that's a little different than what it actually was. One of my favorite pieces is a four-sided sofa in the lobby made from big red-oak slabs, which is what subway benches are made from. The reception desk is made of a raw aluminum that gives it a lot of patina and it's going to continue to get interesting over time. You have these high-low elements together.

On influences from other sectors.

CR: [Working in industries like fashion and tech] taught me speed and efficiency. In tech or beauty, you're designing a final product, while in hospitality, you're creating an experience that unfolds over time. It's a different kind of storytelling.

MS: From retail, I learned about layering user experiences. In hospitality, the interiors become the statement, but they're layered with functionality and user interaction. Seeing how those layers evolve keeps the process exciting.

AU: My architectural background helps carry the conceptual ideation into detailed design. The small details—how materials come together, how spaces function—are just as rooted in the foundation as the big ideas.

On design that is both fresh and timeless.

RR: We avoid trends, focusing instead on designs that feel relevant but timeless. For example, at Romer, we preserved a striking orange marble wall from the building's original design, letting it shape the palette. We think about permanence and flexibility, ensuring elements can evolve without losing the space's integrity.

CR: It's easy to avoid trends if you aren't precious about a design aesthetic. If you're not trying to maintain a look and feel as a design studio every project is approached completely differently and there's a different design solution that's right for that client, for that space, for that time and place. Because of that, the idea of trends don't really cross our minds much, except for potentially something to avoid.

HF: My background and education wasn't in hospitality, I fell into it. When you're just doing product for a market, you do spend a lot of time thinking about what's on trend. One of the things I really fell in love with about hospitality is that you have the power to create a space where what's happening outside this box doesn't matter. Inside this box we can tell a story where a yellow spotted sofa makes all the sense in the world. When the whole story makes sense, even just visually looking at it from top to bottom, you can really do whatever you want inside it. You can create something timeless within your own rules.

On lessons learned from challenging projects.

RR: The UBS Arena project came to us when we were a very small studio. We did not have any completed work at the time and a big client took a chance on a real underdog. It was an amazingly collaborative effort to come together and really break every rule that has ever been done in arenas to bring a hospitality focus to a venue type that hadn't considered hospitality first in the past. We were able to break down preconceived ideas of how design should function in this project type. We challenged ourselves to bring both first-class hospitality and extreme durability for the amount of people and traffic that would pass through. Unlike a restaurant, for example, the design had to translate across different clientele—from hockey fans to pop music fans to Disney on Ice fans.

AN AERIAL VIEW OF THE STANDARD, HURUVALHI MALDIVES

CR: I am a massive sports fan and it was amazing to see how [we were able to] create an arena with real intimacy within it. You're there with 20,000 people but you can find personal moments with just your small group. This is not like other arenas you've been to for that reason.

On finding inspiration.

AU: As a creative, I'm always interested in alternate venues to experience art. Something like modern dance—the set design, the music, the choreography, the dance—it feeds the soul and contributes to what I do and adds to my creativity as an individual.

RR: It's important to make sure we are searching for a diverse set of references that inspire our projects, making sure that we're not always looking towards the European references that might be more commonly referenced in design. Trying to get diversity and inclusivity into the foundation of our projects.

CR: People are craving authenticity, I think more now than ever. We're finding in our conversations with clients and chefs that there's a desire to bring in a collaboration with an artist or a maker, to have more creative hands influence the experience. Although the leaps that AI has made are incredible, there will always be a need for human interaction. The more prevalent that is in design, the more people want to spend time with it.

MS: Trying to get out of my routine as often as possible. My friends know that I will always tag along to something they want to go to. Meet new people, see a different perspective. Having exposure to as many different things as you can—food, art, people—it's not one thing.

HF: I have a lower-brow answer. I'm really into space-age lighting and furniture, and the era of plastic furniture—which fell away because of its environmental impacts and also just perceptions of what luxury is. I'm interested in people experimenting with ways to save some of these designs. Goby was recently working on new ways to mold some fiberglass classics. It's amazing to look back at designs that are historical and how actually futuristic they are. BD

The Belly Planters play with the shape of a classic sack with their strikingly bold asymmetrical form, curvy proportions, and deep titular "belly." Three sizes are available in six distinct colors.

BURRO FROM FOUR HANDS
FOURHANDS.COM

Texas-based painter and sculptor Paul Meyer started exploring artistic interpretations of donkeys while recovering from a life-threatening accident. He then partnered with Four Hands Art Studio to realize the final product: a painting titled Burro, which became his best-selling piece.

COACHELLA FROM HYDRO SYSTEMS
HYDROSYSTEM.COM

The freestanding bathtub is inspired by California's prolific midcentury design while taking cues from the residential rooflines of Palm Springs and Coachella Valley's architectural homes. The tub's fluid form unfolds like butterfly wings on both sides.

PEONIA FROM TILE CLUB
TILECLUB.COM

Informed by the beauty of peonies, the porcelain wallpaper tile translates the flower's graceful silhouette into a mosaic. Made from luxurious Italian marble, the petal-shape details lend a classic charm ideal for bathrooms, shower walls, and hotel and restaurant feature walls.

EMERSON FROM ROOM & BOARD
ROOMANDBOARD.COM

Showcasing clean lines and sturdy construction, the storage cabinet is crafted from sustainable domestic wood that seamlessly incorporates a refrigerator. A durable stone top is an optional add-on.

GEO SCULPTED POOL TOWEL FROM 1CONCIER
1CONCIER.COM

The towel boasts a simple yet sumptuous feel and features a textured geometric jacquard pattern with a subtle gray stripe at the hem. Both plush and durable, it is made with 100 percent cotton.

LITZE FROM BRIZO
BRIZO.COM

Combining a sleek design with functionality, the widespread lavatory faucet comes in high and low spout options. Its concealed, water-efficient laminar flow aerator ensures exceptional performance while maintaining its refined silhouette.

METROPOLIS FROM JACLO
JACLO.COM

Made of brass with a sleek, industrial style that offsets handles with a notch detail on a low-profile escutcheon, the faucet and trim handles also include a knurling texture that improves dexterity.

WINEMAKER FROM NATIVE TRAILS
NATIVETRAILSHOME.COM

Handcrafted in the U.S., the series captures the essence of California's wine country to bring sustainable, artisanal design to hospitality spaces. Upcycled French and American oak staves are soaked in wine during fermentation before being dried, wirebrushed, planed, and sanded.

PLUMA FROM BUZZ
BUZZPRODUCTS.COM

The industrial-inspired bottle and bracket system features a tamper- and theft-proof design. The brackets are easy to install and can house various bottle sizes, making refill and changeover quick and efficient.

SEDONA CANYON FROM FOH
FOHWORLDWIDE.COM

Taking cues from the vivid hues of a natural desert palette, the bath accessories are made from durable vegan leather wrapped around a high-grade metal structure for a contemporary edge.

DREAM DOOR HANGER FROM PARADIGM TRENDS
PARADIGMTRENDS.COM

One side of the Dream Door Hanger—reversible and made from faux leather—is midnight black and reads “Deep in Slumber,” while the light, ivory-colored other side reads “Out on a Stroll.”

FLOWERS IN WONDERLAND FROM MULTIFORME
MULTIFORME.EU

Six unopened artistic glass flowers and inverted gems extend into a vase in the collection inspired by Lewis Carroll’s classic poem starring Alice. The pastel-hued buds reveal additional colors when lit.

BARBADOS FROM HOTELSIGNS
HOTELSIGNS.COM

Inspired by the serene beauty of its eponymous Caribbean island, the line’s simple elegance makes a work of art out of the room number sign with three stacked organic shapes that replicate the ripples of a crystal-clear pool of water.

BOTANIQUE FROM MAYER FABRICS
MAYERFABRICS.COM

The Greenguard Gold-certified upholstery line embodies the essence of the French word for botany as it celebrates the beauty and discovery found in nature. Five patterns are offered on acrylic backing, including Bloom, Flora, Sanctuary, Valley, and Vista.

MANCHAHA FROM JAIPUR LIVING
JAIPURLIVING.COM

Using leftover yarn batches from consumer-facing production, the rug collection is made by weavers in rural India who are sent 50 color shades of wool and given complete freedom in patterns, guaranteeing each design is original and without wasted wool.

MONTAGE WEAVES FROM KRAVET CONTRACT
KRAVET.COM

This sophisticated textile collection includes eight patterns and 60 SKUs that boast rich earthy tones and textures. Each fabric combines bold geometrics with durability and stain resistance, making them ideal for high-traffic environments.

DESIGN EMPORIUM FROM HALLMARK FLOORS

HALLMARKFLOORS.COM

Part of the Serenity series, the collection offers coordinating colors perfectly suited for herringbone and basketweave pattern installations. Each plank is crafted with a premium sawn-cut wear layer.

VICHY FROM KASTHALL KASTHALL.COM

The pure woven wool rug collection celebrates the classic pattern of the same name. This interpretation features the company's signature squares and stripes. Eight color options of the checkered pattern range from neutrals to bolder, more expressive shades.

RENDEZVOUS OASIS FROM SIGNATURE FLOORING

SIGNATUREFLOORING.COM

Part of a collaboration with Stacy Garcia Design Studio, the broadloom and carpet tile collection brings earthy tones and textures indoors across 12 patterns inspired by leaves, water, and organic textures.

CAPE COD FROM WARP & WEFT WARPANDWEFT.COM

The rugs, hand-tufted in Thailand and customizable, feature designs inspired by rolling waves. Part of the Aquask collection, which exemplifies the company's commitment to sustainability, each pattern's luxurious fiber is made from plastic ocean waste.

WABI SABI FROM PERENNIALS PERENNIALSFABRICS.COM

The collection's two new rug designs—plus the reintroduction of Cascade (shown)—blend art, comfort, and durability. Woven from 100-percent solution-dyed acrylic yarn, the line is fade-, mildew-, and UV-resistant and a fit for indoor and outdoor applications.

ICONIC THREADS FROM TARKETT HOSPITALITY

TARKETTHOSPITALITY.COM

This recyclable broadloom carpet collection combines such classic patterns as tweed, checkerboard, houndstooth, and plaid, allowing for easy mixing and matching. The ecofriendly line is made with 100-percent solution-dyed nylon and 10-percent preconsumer recycled content.

DISTANCE FROM MDC INTERIOR SOLUTIONS
MDCWALL.COM

Designed by Thom Filicia, the large-scale Type II wallcovering captures the ethereal beauty of a hazy horizon. Digitally rendered in serene watercolor-inspired brushstrokes, the pattern features sweeping horizontal lines in calming neutral tones.

BLUE FROM WOLF-GORDON
WOLFGORDON.COM

Inspired by the cooler nature of editorial fashion photography, the wallcovering line imbues sculptural patterns with a razor-sharp edge and practical color lines available in eight patterns.

SODAI RUMORS FROM STONE SOURCE
STONESOURCE.COM

Crafted with meticulous attention to detail, the glazed porcelain tiles deliver a vibrant fusion of colors and materials in an array of sizes. Five surface options are offered, including Colour Board, Samarcanda, Silkroad, Journey, and Majesty (shown).

ARTIZIA FROM ARTLINE GROUP
ARTLINEGROUP.COM

The series of textile textured wallcoverings includes designs with embroidered patterns and surfaces with elegant foil colors. They also come with water-repellant technology, ensuring durability and practicality.

AJIRO HONEYCOMB FROM MAYA ROMANOFF
MAYAROMANOFF.COM

Nodding to the structural integrity of a beehive, the wallcovering is characterized by multi-hued hexagonal shapes made from paulownia wood that is handpainted and inlaid in an organic pattern with a metallic accent.

RESONANCE FROM ASTEK
ASTEK.COM

Handpainted by the in-house design team, the wallcovering collection captures the fluidity of thought through the expressive movement of brushstrokes. Each design reflects a state of calm, with free-flowing gestural marks that link to a serene stream of consciousness.

GREENHOUSE GATHERING FROM ARTE
ARTE-INTERNATIONAL.COM

Inspired by decorative moldings, the wallcovering evokes the sensation of peering through the glass panels of a greenhouse. The Art Deco offering comes in a monochrome palette reminiscent of plasterwork.

IDYLIC FROM CONCERTEX
CONCERTEX.COM

The collection of coated fabrics acts as an ode to inner sanctuaries. Comprising two digitally printed silicone hybrid offerings, Aura (shown) and Hanabi, the line's subtle ombré gradation depicts the intricacy of textile collage.

HOSPITALITY WALLCOVERINGS FROM FABRICUT CONTRACT
FABRICUTCONTRACT.COM

Ten patterns have been added to the collection, characterized by large-scale contemporary and abstract geometric designs with complementary textures. Fractured Rhythm (shown in colorway Almond) has a gentle shimmer.

3D BIOMIMICRY GARDENS FROM GARDEN ON THE WALL
GARDENONTHEWALL.COM

These custom rock-scape gardens depict rock formations and flora in a lifelike form. Blending the intricacies of cliffs and boulders with the serenity of moss and plant life, the installations are crafted on 3D surfaces.

MYRIAD FROM CULP HOSPITALITY
CULPHOSPITALITY.COM

The patterns in this upholstery collection emerge like stars in the sky: distinct yet harmonious. Ranging from a maximalist chenille to a multicolored bouclé texture and a sleek, sophisticated velvet, the line comes in 61 hues.

TRELLIS FROM INNOVATIONS
INNOVATIONSUSA.COM

The large-scale, four-panel mural, shown in Hyacinth, features vibrantly colored leaves and vines that appear to climb up the wall. The subtle ombré background is printed over a metallic fabric-faced vinyl, which enhances the botanical motif with a warm glow.

PARIS FROM FABRIC INNOVATIONS
FABRICINNOVATIONS.COM

The versatile upholstery collection of three patterns, one tweed (Coco), one vegan faux leather (Orsay), and one velvet (Madame Messieurs), is offered in a range of 40 colors. All three pass 50,000 double rubs.

LEVATA FROM EMSER TILE
EMSER.COM

Channeling Earth's beauty, the unglazed porcelain tile collection reflects nature's resilience, irregularity, and uniqueness. Four colorways are available in a range of sizes, thicknesses, and matte and brushed finishes, as well as non-slip and antimicrobial coatings.

AZTEC HONEYCOMB FROM LUCILLE STUDIO

LUCILLE.STUDIO
Three stacked layouts come together for one design available in many different materials. The 3D interconnecting tiles are suitable for walls, ceilings, and floors in both indoor and outdoor spaces.

MILLBROOK FROM LOOK. WALLS &
INTERIORS
LOOKWALLS.COM

Evoking the beauty of a Renaissance fresco and part of the larger Customs collection, the wallcovering is a sweeping panorama of a valley where lush forests stretch to the horizon, interrupted by winding paths and hidden clearings.

ELEMENTS OCEANO GOLD FROM MATERIALS INC.
MATERIALS-INC.COM

The mirror-like, golden wave design of this decorative surface creates a sense of visual movement while adding texture to walls, counters, and other surfaces. The 3D texture captures the light to create a radiant effect.

ASTRA FROM KOROSEAL
KOROSEAL.COM

Capturing the essence of the current Art Deco resurgence, the Type II wallcovering is a modern interpretation of the bold geometric styles of the 1920s and '30s. The starburst-inspired composition resembles radiating beams of light in nine colorways.

MORELLINO FROM DANAOLIVING.COM

Designed by Toan Nguyen, the furniture line is influenced by midcentury design as it combines natural rugged fibers with soft lines. The series includes chaises, lounge and dining chairs, and sofas in teak and natural stone.

CADENZA FROM EXPORMIM.COM

A collaboration with David Lopez Quincoces, the rattan collection—which includes a loveseat, three-seater sofa, XL sofa, and two armchairs—is inspired by musical rhythms. The vertical rattan elements are arranged in an orderly manner to form the silhouette.

HERON FROM JANUS ET CIE.COM

Crafted in naturally finished FSC-certified premium teak frames, the armchair features squared legs that are set at an alluring angle beneath the curved, integrated back and arms, which support the chair's handwoven polypropylene ropes.

SARANAC FROM GLOSTER.COM

Showcasing a solid teak frame that nods to midcentury design, the collection features contemporary lines and a back woven with outdoor rope in a rich raven color. The pillow-like cushions come in a variety of outdoor fabrics.

HIXON FROM COVERS AND ALL.COM

The outdoor series varies in aesthetics, from an urban contemporary style to a rustic country feel. The customizable deep seating, sectional, and dining options offer a range of colors and a variety of arm treatments, tabletops, seat back heights, and fabrics.

PHOENIX FROM FIBERBUILT.COM

Engineered with aluminum hubs, joints, and finial, as well as fiberglass ribs, the umbrella provides strength and flexibility. The double-tier canopy is made of furniture-grade, solution-dyed acrylic and comes with an adjustable single valance.

JUNO NOCHE FROM DESIGN AND DIRECT SOURCE DDSTILE.COM

The tile collection features intricate Art Deco floral patterns and surprising depth. Made from high-quality glazed porcelain, it is crafted with commercial areas in mind.

SWIING FROM FERMOB FERMOB.COM

Designed by Tristan Lohner, who was inspired by both the rhythm of jazz and the fluid movement of swing dance, the lamp combines artistic elegance with practical functionality. The simple side-to-side tilt makes it easy to turn off and on.

RHYME AND REASON FROM MARAZZI MARAZZIUSA.COM

The ceramic wall tile assortment boasts a rich color palette plus a terracotta colorway. The saturated hues partner with a variety of textures to create a chic wall tile design for a unique surface feel.

STRATA FROM LUSIVE LUSIVE.COM

The chandelier features cascading tiers of leather strands in rich emerald tones and warm neutral hues. Light beams from a central satin brass canopy, and the chandelier's overall height is adjustable.

PETRA FROM SUNLIGHT2 SUNLIGHT2.COM

The pendant is crafted from premium white alabaster sourced from Spain, with each handpicked stone showcasing distinct natural beauty and grain patterns. The clean, minimalist design also features an adjustable dim-to-warm LED light engine.

THE THREE BEARS FROM COMPOSITION HOSPITALITY

Inspired by Goldilocks and the Three Bears, the company's Perfect Option is the result of experimenting with varying levels of firmness, resulting in Superior Soft, Superior Medium, and Superior Firm foam options.

CROWN CREATIVE'S DAVID CAROFANO RESPONDS TO A CHANGING INDUSTRY

By Katie Kervin

Working in restaurants since the age of 14, David Carofano's passion for hospitality started early. A transformative graduate program at the School of Visual Arts in New York, however, encouraged him to take a different route.

It was there that he uncovered a new dimension of hospitality: branding. Introduced to industry connections by a professor, Carofano experienced what he describes as a light bulb moment, realizing he "could be in the hospitality space but not work in a restaurant," he recalls. "I could create designs, brands, and concepts and be the creative vision behind it."

This revelation led him to roles at firms such as Brand Bureau, an AvroKO company, and Pure Grey, an independent hospitality consultancy. While at the latter, where he collaborated with several branding agencies, he connected with Ryan Crown, founder and creative director of Crown Creative.

Today, as the Belfast, London, and New York firm's strategy and commercial director, Carofano's work emphasizes the critical role of brand identity and design in setting hospitality concepts apart.

Why is branding so important in hospitality? In restaurants, the level of food quality has risen, especially in bigger markets. For the most part, everyone has good food and everyone is talented. We expect that now as consumers. The question is: How do you differentiate one restaurant from another? It's about attracting people to your space even before they walk in the door and taste the food. That's where branding comes in.

How does Crown Creative collaborate with clients? If we are working with a chef or restaurateur, they may have an idea of what kind of restaurant they want to open. We help them articulate that. What does it look like? What are you serving? What's the music like? Those touchpoints go back to my hospitality days.

We start with a story we're trying to tell. Sometimes we work with folks who are not in F&B or hospitality, like a developer or real estate person, so we're a little bit more involved and do market research to understand what that location needs. There's a fine balance of fitting in but standing out. You don't want to do something in a location where people don't get it or it won't resonate. You want to do something familiar, but in a new way.

THE FORTHCOMING BIRCH CABINS IN NORTHERN IRELAND, A COLLABORATION WITH 2020 ARCHITECTS

THE BRANDING FOR THE REGENCY HOUSE HOTEL AND MEMBERS CLUB IN BELFAST

Describe your process. When we're working with a designer, we love to collaborate with them and share inspiration. If we're doing the concepts first, we'll create mood boards for where we think the concept should go. Then we have a bit of a back and forth on what the direction may be to try to understand the vision.

What shifts are you observing in the industry? We're in an age of contrast, where you can have a beautifully designed restaurant but you're serving fried chicken sandwiches. We're seeing this juxtaposition a lot more. Another is this idea of modernism versus nostalgia. We want to go back to old-school supper clubs, classic steakhouses, and Italian restaurants like Carbone.

The idea of restaurants being multipurpose is also interesting, where it's a café in the morning and a wine bar in the evening, or it has a retail shop, but it's also a bakery. We've taken the restaurant and broken it apart into these different experiences, which is cool if done right.

What's your dream project? As we grow as an agency, the dream project for me is to own every single piece of the process—from brand creation to opening the doors. BD
